Happy Baby Initiative Comments <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Increasing number of younger children with emotional dysregulation; no referrals of children under 2.5 years how do you identify babies & mothers at risk? there are screening tools that are supposed to be used to identify depression, post-partum from the moms Research is showing that mood disorders come from mom's who had no prior issues. how are the mothers being reached and recruited for this? is it being advertised to only those involved at the hospital or CAS or is it being advertised at health clinic also? Available to everyone all pharmacy, dr. office, sexual health clinics, next goal is how to get word out on social media, young adult clinic with the focus on bonding will you identify children with developmental issue? The staff might recognize developmental issues at this stage program geared to at risk mom's young mother issues based on the home they are able to provide? Any initiatives to help the mom? Speaks to the support pieces and how to build that in other than just the support from the group consultations with indigenous? Have been invited but not yet engaged Ottawa has an under 6 as a priority in the restructuring for child and youth mental health. This program is unique in including expecting moms. Co facilitated groups with a physician is unique. 	Deena Shorkey

Successful recovery day. Talks around language use Denis will share with the table.
Denis has been attending pathways operations meetings they are looking for a second member to sit at the advisory table

- Pathways to Better Care

- 1) asking if there are family/support persons/clients if they would be interested in engaging with Pathways for a qualitative assessment of the process maps we have developed as part of a focus group
- 2) an opportunity which HQO is advertising regarding the development of a new and very important standard which is described below. Members who are interested can apply to be part of an Advisory Committee.

Transitions Between Inpatient Mental Health Settings And Home
Apply to join an Advisory Committee - Applications will be accepted until October 8, 2019;

*TRANSITIONS BETWEEN INPATIENT MENTAL HEALTH SETTINGS AND HOME
Care in the Community*

This quality standard will address care for people of all ages transitioning (moving) between hospital and home after a hospital admission for mental health and/or addiction conditions. This includes people who have been admitted to any type of hospital. The transition from hospital to home is commonly referred to as a “hospital discharge.” For this quality standard, “home” is broadly defined as a person’s usual place of residence and may include personal residences, assisted-living facilities, long-term care facilities, and shelters.

The quality standard will include care provided around the time of transition in the inpatient hospital setting and community, including primary care, hospital outpatient care, rehabilitation, and community supports and services. It will focus on the continuum of care from being in hospital to preparing for a successful discharge and returning to the community (e.g., coordination of follow-up mental health and addictions care and medical care in the community, safety and wellbeing, out-of-pocket costs, and the limitations of funded services).
